

- Trends in high-volume electric power (for industries with contracted power of 500 kW or higher)

High-volume electric power sales rose 13.8% YoY, in part because of the improvement of production levels in industry sectors such as machinery and steel.

Trends in high-volume electric power for major industries

*Figures in parentheses are YoY growth.

Industry sector	Overview
Paper/pulp (9.1 %)	Sales rose YoY in part because production of coated paper and corrugated cardboard stock increased.
Chemicals (4.2 %)	Although some customers increased generation of their own electric power, leading to declines in sales and production, sales rose YoY in part because of higher production of petrochemicals.
Ceramics, stone and clay (18.9 %)	Sales rose YoY in part because production of automobile glass and graphite electrodes increased.
Iron and steel (39.4 %)	Sales rose YoY in part because production increases in steel for motor vehicles.
Machinery (14.8 %)	Sales rose YoY in part because production increased in semiconductors for digital home electronic goods and automotive components.

Notes: Due to changes in the Japan Standard Industrial Classifications, classifications by industry have been modified from April 2009 onwards.

The YoY rate of increase for FY2009 was calculated using the present industrial classifications for FY2008 results.
